Abstract

The invention is a method for predicting the likelihood of success of an endeavor by an organization, such as a merger or entry into a new product area, based on a quantification and assessment of the depth of 5 communication within and without the organization. The invention also is a method of improving the likelihood of success of an endeavor by improving communication.